'Save America Freedom Rally' at the Courthouse

Dozens of attendees gathered Tuesday to protest vaccine mandates, other issues

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

On Tuesday evening, several dozen people turned out for the "Save America Freedom Rally" on the steps of the Wabash County Courthouse.

The event featured both local and statewide conservative speakers touching on several contemporary issues.

With a slow drizzle continuing throughout the event, co-organizer Laura Cole referenced a Thomas Paine quote about "the summer soldier and the sunshine patriot."

"We don't have any sunshine patriots here," said Cole.

Young visits Wabash, talks issues

Senator discusses infrastructure, Afghanistan, Jan. 6 and more forcement community has been "unfairly criticized with a broad brush in the wake of the Black Lives

On Thursday, Sept. 16, Sen. Todd Young, R-Indiana, visited Wabash during his swing through the state. Young met with Mayor Scott Long, Wabash Police Department (WPD) assistant police chief Bob Pilgrim and others.

During a phone interview earlier this week, Young said he had been visiting with local leaders "to try to get a sense of the challenges and opportunities."

Young said worker shortages are hurting some local businesses in addition to the police force itself.

"Our law enforcement community, in particular, has felt the effects of not just pandemic-related challenges and the public assistance programs which have created an incentive for Americans to stay home as opposed to going to accept jobs that are open," said Young.

Young said the law en-

Matter movement and the defund the police movement."

"We, of course, need to make sure that our police maintain the trust of all Americans and everyone is respected and receives equal treatment under the law, but the last thing we need to do is defame our police who disproportionately serve our minority communities and our lower-income communities," said Young. "There seems to be fairly broad agreement about that irrespective of geography and race and ethnicity across the state of Indiana. But there's still a vocal and I think unhelpful minority of individuals who are disparaging members of our police force and are propitiating a defund the police movement and removing legal protections our officers have that is unhelpful to police recruitment."

Celebrating 50 years

Paul-Richard team credits customer focus with dealership longevity

By JARED KEEVER
Peru Tribune Editor

It's easy to say a longstanding business has served a community for decades, but Lon Ravesloot says there is another way to look at it.

"I'd say the community has served us," he told the Tribune on Friday. "It's a two way street."

Ravesloot was talking about the history of the Chevrolet dealership that his father, Paul, helped start in Peru in the 1970s with Richard Ooms under the name Paul-Richard Chevrolet.

This month, the dealership, now a full General Motors dealership, celebrates 50 years in business.

"A lot of people don't know that it is two first names," Sales Manager Tom Gaddy said last week when he sat down to talk to the paper about the dealership on West Main Street and how the business has changed over the years.

It was founded, according to a brief history on the dealership website, on Sept. 1, 1971 when Ooms and Paul Ravesloot purchased Peru's Pate Chevrolet.

"And although Richard would be the Dealer Principal, they agreed on using the name Paul-Richard Chevrolet," the history says.

"The original building dates back to the 1940s and has undergone seven expansions and two major renovations," it continues. "The latest and most substantial renovation was completed in 2012."

"Most recently, the purchase of an adjacent property allowed for expansion of the lot for our inventory of pre-owned vehicles."

Ooms passed away several years ago, leaving the elder Ravesloot at the helm. He retired in 2000 as president of the company but has remained active in the dealership as a consultant.

For the younger Ravesloot, staying active himself has been a key to the longevity.

The car-selling business has changed a lot over the 35 years that he's been involved. The internet has put huge inventories at shoppers' fingertips which means competition has grown stiff.

To survive, Lon Ravesloot says he's tried to stay dedicated to serving customers well.

"I'm very conscious of that myself," he said, "because it's too easy to go somewhere else."

It's why he says he stays involved with the business.

"I am here everyday," he said.

It helps keep that connection to the customer, but to the staff as well.

"We have a very good team. It's the entire team that helps," he added.

Alumnus to speak at Manchester about growing sustainability

Jason Elliott is the assistant director of sustainability for Duke University

By ANNE GREGORY

Jason Elliott, Manchester Class of 2011, will return to the North Manchester campus – virtually – on Monday, Sept. 27, to speak about ways to mitigate climate change through sustainable solutions.

He is the assistant director of sustainability for Duke University. He will talk about how young people can work toward a more sustainable future regardless of their area of study or profession.

It will be live-streamed in Cordier Auditorium and on Facebook at www.facebook.com/ManchesterUniv.

The presentation is part of the Values, Ideas and the Arts series, which offers academic enrichment for Manchester students. It was made possible by the Peace Studies Institute and Sunrise Movement chapter at Manchester University.

Anne Gregory is the assistant director of media relations in the Office of Strategic Communications at Manchester University.

WCUF, SAW volunteers complete ramp project

An older ramp at a Wabash residence was demolished and another installed

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

Wabash County United Fund (WCUF) volunteers once again teamed up with SAW (Servants At Work), this time to demolish an old ramp and build another ramp for the same residence in Wabash, said WCUF resource coordinator Di Wion on Thursday.

Wion said the demolition in the 400 block of Anna Street began at 2:45 p.m. Monday, Aug. 23.

Wion said by 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 24, the new ramp was completed.

"Start-to-finish, both the demo and build took just less than 28 hours," said Wion.

Gaddy is one of those team members and he’s been with the dealership for more than 30 years. That longevity on the staff side, he suggested, has led to the same thing on the customer side. “We just sold a guy his 22nd vehicle here,” he said. “And that’s not an unusual story.” A lot of it, Gaddy said, has to do with a smaller town atmosphere where customers – whether they are local or have driven in after finding a car through the internet – don’t feel rushed in the buying process. And those long-serving team members are well equipped to make quick, confident decisions that help with the service.

As he was talking about his time at the dealership, Gaddy was called away to help with a situation. A customer who had just bought a vehicle had a warning light come on on her dash. He stepped out of the office, took the call and came back. His answer to her was easy, he said, “Don’t worry about it, we will get it fixed.” The 50 years of business that that type of service has led to earned them recognition from GM recently, and it’s something that Ravesloot suggested he doesn’t take for granted. “It seems to be a rarity,” he said of the milestone for a small family-owned dealership. “But we are very proud that we have been able to do it.” Jared Keever, Peru Tribune editor, may be reached by email at jkeever@perutribune.com.

Wion said five SAW volunteers had worked at pre-cutting and prefabrication of this ramp project in Warsaw. Wion said they did this before work began on that Monday, “so they came on Tuesday morning ready to build.” Monce and Wion were there to assist. Wion said Diana Stephan from North Manchester had volunteered to help in the afternoon, but because of the intense heat and the accompanying advisory as well as the build nearing completion, she was encouraged to stay in her cool home and not make the commute. “The property is a supported living home for Wabash County ambulatory-challenged residents who need 24/7 care, so the demolition and build needed to be done in record time,” said Wion. “Mission accomplished. The Wabash County United Fund is grateful to SAWs and our county volunteers for making this ramp build a success.” Earlier this summer, over a dozen local volunteers joined forces “to free a North Manchester resident from his home.”

Wion said the project was completed by 14 Wabash County volunteers on Monday, July 5 and Tuesday, July 6, during “two miserably hot days.” Wion said the volunteers worked under the leadership of Mike Glass of Lebanon, who was the project manager assigned to the job to SAW. Wion said SAW is a non-profit organization from Indianapolis with which the WCUF had partnered on three different ramp projects at that point. Wion said SAW provided the lumber, the project design and the project manager, who was also a volunteer. Rob Burgess, Wabash Plain Dealer editor, may be reached at rburgess@wabashplaindealer.com.

Endless Frontier Act

The Endless Frontier Act was unveiled by Young in May 2020 along with Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer, D-New York, Rep. Ro Khanna, D-California, and Rep. Mike Gallagher, R-Wisconsin. Young said Schumer had reaffirmed that this was a top priority of his to advance and bring to the floor by Columbus Day. “So my hope is that that timeline can be met,” said Young. There is of course a full calendar in Washington, much of it full of things that are of concern to me, but with nearly 70 votes behind it in the U.S. Senate as it was passed over into the House, I’m very confident in the end it’s going to find its way back into the Senate and pass a compromised version between the House and the Senate and be sent to the President’s desk before year’s end.” Young said that one large version of the bill was passed out of the Senate, but that once it reached the House of Representatives, it was broken into six separate bills, three of which have already passed. “So obviously they need to pass the rest of the package and at that point, we can reconcile the two efforts and come up with a compromise bill that can pass out of the House and Senate,” said Young. Young said he was hearing excitement everywhere he went about the bill because “it will really benefit the state of Indiana and will lead to a lot of investment in 21st-century good-paying jobs especially if we land one of these tech hubs, which I know is a top priority of our governor, our university presidents and so many of our business leaders.”

American Innovation and Jobs Act

The American Innovation and Jobs Act was debuted by Young earlier this year along with Sen. Maggie Hassan, D-New Hampshire, Sen. Catherine Cortez Masto, D-Nevada, Sen. Rob Portman, R-Ohio, and Sen. Ben

Sasse, R-Nebraska. Young said that bill may pass in conjunction with a government spending bill to continue to fund the operations of the government or it may pass in conjunction with one of these other spending bills that they were going to consider in coming months. Young said the $3.5 trillion infrastructure spending bill was “not something that (he) will support.” “In fact, I will be fighting against it quite strongly. It’s possible that a scaled-down version of that legislation could be signed into law and it might include the American Innovation and Jobs Act,” said Young.

Infrastructure bill

Young said the “core” infrastructure bill he supported was different than the larger one he opposed. The one he supports would focus more on broadband and highway funding, not “human” infrastructure. “Unfortunately though I believe strongly we need to invest in these areas, Speaker Pelosi has insisted on tying its passage to the larger human infrastructure bill which is inconsistent with my own beliefs and the fiscally responsible values of Hoosiers,” said Young. “I actually helped negotiate some of the provisions as it related to the core infrastructure bill, not the human infrastructure bill. And there are some good things in there. We need to make broadband investments. We need to invest in our roads and bridges. We just should not be tying it to the largest spending bill in American history which has not even been debated in committees, is being developed behind closed doors and is all a product of Sen. Bernie Sanders’ socialist budget.” Young said the larger infrastructure bill was not targeted enough. “I think it spends more than is needed in a lot of these different areas, thus, exacerbating our national debt,” said Young. Young said creating new categories of citizens to receive special dispensation for special infrastructure investment was “a really dangerous precedent.” Young said investing in electric vehicle charging stations would disproportionately benefit wealthy Americans as opposed to the regular, middle-class Americans. “It is another wasteful expenditure and something that I think is unjustifiable. There are some specific provisions in it that I regarded as inappropriate,” said Young.

Afghanistan withdrawal

Young has been critical of President Joe Biden’s withdrawal from Afghanistan in recent days. Young said he assigns a “measure of blame to our federal officials both members of Congress and presidents going back a lot of years.” “But, I do think that a withdrawal could have taken place that enhanced our national security and allowed us to focus on the generational challenge of a growing and threatening Chinese community party and it should have been done the following way,” said Young. Young said he was opposed to establishing an arbitrary timeline to get out of Afghanistan.

“The Biden Administration established a timeline of having all our troops out by the end of August, seemingly because that would have allowed the president of the United States to deliver a victory speech on the 20th anniversary of 9/11,” said Young. “These sorts of political motivations ought not find their way into our strategic decisions about withdrawal.” Young said President Donald Trump’s negotiated withdrawal was conditions-based “and those conditions weren’t being met.” “So we had a lot of leverage as it related to the Taliban to insist on a later timeline and to identify all of the American citizens on the ground and to get all of them out before we evacuated the people with the guns,” said Young. Young said evacuating Bagram Air Base without notifying allies made the problem even worse. “I think it’s right and proper for me to be critical since I sit on the Oversight Committee for the Department of State,” said Young. “I am advocating that we hold robust oversight hearings in the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee.” The committee held their first hearing days ago, during which Secretary of State Antony Blinken appeared. “I think it was highly encouraging that the criticism of the Biden Administration was bipartisan in nature,” said Young. “So even though I believe the Biden Administration was partisan in its withdrawal decisions, I was very encouraged to see my colleagues be non-partisan in our oversight of the fallout from that decision.”

Jan. 6 Commission

Young voted against the creation of an independent commission to investigate the Jan. 6 attack on the Capitol. Since then, the House has begun its proceedings. Young said he hasn’t been following those hearings. “I didn’t support the Jan. 6 commission because it’s pretty obvious everything that happened,” said Young. “We had the FBI investigating that right now. We have the legal processes moving forward.” Young said Schumer and Pelosi have been vocal about their desire to “turn Jan. 6 into a political matter.” “I don’t think that horrible day should be politicized,” said Young. “I think that every American ought to recognize that it was both unlawful and abhorrent what occurred that day. It was an act of domestic terrorism, much like we saw in the streets of our various cities throughout America in the proceeding year.” Young said that even though the 9/11 Commission is often held up as a gold standard, it had its own problems, too. “The 9/11 Commission they avoided the most difficult questions,” said Young. “This so-called independent commission ended up being political anyway. This is what happens when you have so-called independent commissions, they end up being partisan anyway because they are led by politicians. If you revisit the 9/11 Commission and the critiques that were made of it, they punted on the hardest questions. I actually think working in the light of day through the committees of jurisdiction within Congress is the best way to move forward. In addition to letting our legal processes move forward.”

Authorization of Use of Military Force in Iraq

Another piece of legislation Young said he would be working on with Sen. Tim Kaine D-Minnesota, was the repeal of the Authorizations of Use of Military Force in Iraq from 1991 and 2002. “Never in our nation’s history after a war ended Congress spoken up and said we need to take these things off the books because they can be used to justify future wars by presidents. This is a re-assertion of Congress’ war-making powers, something we’ve inappropriately delegated to the executive branch over a number of generations.” Young said he was confident the bill would pass out of Congress and be signed by Biden. Rob Burgess, Wabash Plain Dealer editor, may be reached by email at rburgess@wabashplaindealer.com.

What time is it?

By DAVE SNOWDON

The year is 5782, no, I am not talking about the future, it is this year. On Sept. 8, Israel rang in the new year 5782. Israel is unique when it comes to New Year’s, they celebrate two each year. One, for the beginning of the religious calendar, which starts with Passover, in the Spring; and the second, which is called the “Head of the Year,” their civil New Year, celebrated in the fall and begins on the religious holiday, Rosh Hashanah, or Feast of Tabernacles. One of the significant features of this New Year is that it is a Sabbatical year, the seventh year; called the “shmita” in Hebrew. And just like the seventh day is called the Sabbath, a day of rest with no work; there is the seventh year of sabbatical rest, shmita, where the land is to rest from planting. (Lev. 25:3-5). The shmita is to be a special year of trusting in the Lord for His provisions.

God is a God of order and design and His commands were never to be a burden to the people, but to enable them to have ordered and productive lives. To have one day in seven as a day of rest from work is beneficial for one’s health. And resting the land one year in seven is beneficial to the soil in replacing needed nutrients. God also, gave provisions with His command. The year before the shmita, the sixth year, was always a bumper crop, enough to provide for the people during the seventh year. God’s provisions are always more than adequate. The struggle every seventh year was do I trust God with my future needs in the seventh year or do I take matters into my own hands and plant crops? A test of faith of really trusting God to supply all my needs in the seventh year. God warned the people of Israel that if they did not keep the shmita, then He would remove them from the land so that the land could rest. The Bible tells us that Israel forgot God’s commands and promises. They turned to other gods and in their wickedness the land became corrupt. 2 Chronicles 36:21 records the fall of Israel to the Babylonians and their 70 years of captivity in Babylon was to remove the people from the land so it could have rest. According to Leviticus 25:2 the tradition of the “Sabbatical year” only applies to land inside Israel. But the challenge for us to trust God in our day is still the same. Do I trust God to supply my needs when I obey Him? Or do I fall back on my reasoning and take matters into my own hands? Do I rely on the logic of the world and fall in line with what others say? When we fall back on our reasoning or that of the world instead of trusting God, there is a price to pay. Proverbs 16:25 says, “There is a way that seems right unto man(kind) but its end is the way of death.” When it comes down to it, isn’t that the definition of faith? To trust God to provide and protect us when we don’t know what the future holds? “Now faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen.” (Hebrews 11:1) During these days of COVID-19 recovery and warnings of economic stress, fear seems to dominate our land. But fear is a liar. It offers no hope. Where do we go to find hope and direction? Who has the answers? Do we trust God to provide for us or do we rely on the conventional wisdom of the media and the government promises? Proverbs 3:5 and 6 says “Trust in the Lord with all your heart and do not rely on your reasoning. In all your ways acknowledge Him and he will make your paths straight.” What time is it? Time to trust God and return to Him and rely on Him to provide our needs and protection. Honor God in 2021 and 2022 with your trust in Him. *Dave Snowden and his wife recently moved to the Wabash community to be near six of their 11 grandchildren and their parents. ## RALLY

Victory Christian Church Pastor Timothy Morbitzer read part of an article from Dutch Sheets of “Give Him 15” regarding federal COVID-19 vaccine mandates, among other issues. The stage was also adorned with a large photo of Marine Cpl. Humberto Sanchez, a Logansport native who recently died in Afghanistan. Next up was Sen. Andy Zay, R-Huntington, said his concerns about government overreach began when some workers were deemed “essential” and others were deemed “non-essential.” “As a man of faith and a father of five I have never met a non-essential human being,” said Zay. “We don’t want the government to run our lives. I believe that you know what’s best for yourself.” After Zay finished his remarks, Matt Dillon took to the stage. Dillon is the chair of the Wabash County Republican Party but will be appearing “in his role as” Wabash County Councilmember. Dillon said he was against the recent federal vaccine mandates. “Here we see not only an emperor without a barrier to totalitarianism but we see the hammer of socialism trying to conscript free markets into its armies,” said Dillon. “I see glimmers of Obamacare in all of this. We are so close to communism right now.” Dillon said he was not convinced the Supreme Court would intervene to stop the mandates. “We will not stand down. We will not retreat. This is our home,” said Dillon. Up next was fellow Wabash County Councilmember Lorissa Sweet, who spoke about the feelings of despair she felt on Sept. 11, 2001, and the hope she felt on Sept. 12, 2001. “The spirit of America was alive and well,” said Sweet. “We were a united nation. In our darkest hour as a nation, we were not defeated. We were united. As I stand in front of the TV now 20 years later in 2021 I get that sick feeling in my gut once again. I’ve never seen us more divided. But as I look around I see the spirit of Sept. 12 is alive and well.” Sweet said she was also against the federal COVID-19 vaccine mandates, the additional federal unemployment stipend and purported election fraud. “I don’t know about you, but I’m tired of division.

I’m tired of the lies. I’m tired of the censorship. I’m tired of the so-called fake fact-checkers. I’m tired of the fear-mongering. I’m tired of the mandates. I’m tired of the manipulation and I’m tired of my freedoms and your freedoms being taken away one by one by people who have forgotten what it means to be an American,” said Sweet. “My children and my grandchildren deserve better.” After Sweet finished, a third member of the Wabash County Council spoke. Former Wabash County Republican Party chair and current Wabash County Councilmember Barbara Pearson started her remarks with a round of applause for the veterans in attendance. Pearson said she had lost friends and family recently because of her strong political views. “I am not a rogue Republican. I am a fed-up patriot,” she said, to applause. “Right now we’re fighting for the soul of our country and to me, that’s more important than someone liking me. We have a republic to save and we have to do it now. The freedoms you surrender today are the freedoms your grandchildren and great-grandchildren will never know.”

Pearson said she saw the actions of the state and federal government during the pandemic as signs of authoritarianism. “Elected officials are not rulers,” said Pearson. “We the people elect our officials to represent us. And those elected officials should be doing what we the people tell them they should be doing. Just because they say so doesn’t mean we can’t challenge or demand change.” Pearson said those who felt as she did should send money directly to candidates they support and not to the state or federal Republican Party “because they choose who to support.” Pearson said she was inspired by Rosa Parks, and Desmond Doss, whose story was told in the movie, “Hacksaw Ridge.” “We gotta fight like 1776 and I’m not talking about the violence, I’m talking about the spirit of those patriots who helped found our nation,” said Pearson. To conclude the slate of scheduled speakers, former Indiana Attorney General Curtis Hill took to the stage to touch on a diverse array of subjects from “cancel culture” to the “new world order of inclusion, diversity and equity” to abortion to George Washington.

“We are here because we love America. And America has become something we no longer recognize,” said Hill. “The problem with giving anyone in government the ability to mandate, they get a taste for it. Hold your elected officials accountable. Get rid of these rascals.” As Hill exited the stage, calls to vote Gov. Eric Holcomb out were heard from the audience. To begin the open mic portion of the event, Andy Lyons, a retiring Elwood Community Schools teacher from Marion, took to the stage. In April 2020, Lyons organized a protest outside the governor’s mansion in Indianapolis. “You’re not alone,” said Lyons. “Everything they do is fear. They’re trying to keep you complacent and in your seat. Do not comply. Do not comply.” Lyons concludes his remarks by speaking directly “to the men in this crowd and the men in this community.” “You need to stand up for your families. You need to fight like you’ve never fought before,” said Lyons. “You need to get rid of the football game and spend time emailing your legislators, calling your city council, calling your school boards. The time is yours.

The women for too long have been fighting the battle while we stood along being amused by sports as though we were Romans. It’s time to stand up and protect your family. It’s time to stand up and be a man. It’s time to stand up and be a leader. This garbage has to stop. I am calling the men out. Do what you are supposed to do, because that’s what God created you for to be the leader of the family. Do it. I don’t care what people think. Yes, you’re going to lose friends. Yes, you may lose your job. Stand for what is right and what is righteous under the Lord.” After Lyons finished, a few more speakers took to the stage, including two local health care workers who said they were going to lose their jobs over refusing the COVID-19 vaccine. As the open mic portion finished, Master Sgt. Bradley Frank, a Wabash native who has been on active duty at Grissom Air Reserve Base for the past 18 years, gave the closing benediction. The event concluded with the crowd singing along with a rendition of “God Bless America.” Rob Burgess, Wabash Plain Dealer editor, may be reached by email at rburgess@wabashplainedealer.com.

The handling of Haitian migrants at the U.S. border is shameful

The photographs, taken Sunday by Paul Ratje on the banks of the Rio Grande in Texas, show U.S. Customs and Border Patrol agents on horseback chasing down migrants from Haiti, a nation crippled by earthquakes, hurricanes, political violence and extreme poverty.

Desperate migrants – carrying food and water for their families and themselves – scrambled away from the agents' charging horses.

At least one man, according to news reports, fell trying to avoid the long reins waved in the air by an agent on horseback.

Think about that: An agent, carrying with him the authority of the U.S. government, riding down a defenseless, frightened Black man.

This, in America, in 2021. Not 1821.

The issues surrounding unauthorized migration across our nation's border with Mexico are undeniably complex. And the rush of Haitian migrants in recent days has presented Biden and his team with a difficult set of choices.

Even so, the scenes that unfolded at the border Sunday are indefensible, no matter your politics or your position on border policy.

As White House press secretary Jen Psaki seemed to acknowledge Monday: "I've seen some of the footage. I don't have the full context. I can't imagine what context would make that appropriate. ... I don't think anyone seeing that footage would think it was acceptable or appropriate."

None of it is acceptable nor appropriate.

Yet, Biden's team already has sent hundreds of desperate migrants back to Haiti. Thousands more will soon follow, as the administration rushes to mount an airlift that will ferry people back, not to safety, but to chaos and fear.

Their only "crime" was to hope that America would live up to its values and promises, that huddled masses could still find refuge here.

But this is America in 2021. It is Joe Biden's America. It is our America.

Vaccine mandates are huge cost savings

Many business leaders are reluctant to say so publicly, but President Biden's vaccine mandate is a welcomed gift. It offers them and their employees a relatively easy way to dodge what may be a looming health insurance price spike. For businesses that find it hard to hire and keep workers, this should be especially beneficial. It will also help maintain workplace comity at a time when it is about to be heavily stressed by rising health-care insurance costs driven by unvaccinated workers and their families.

Faithful readers of this column will know my distaste for much government regulation. It has become so extensive and intrusive that businesses often find themselves spending time and energy over patently silly rules. From occupational licensing of interior designers to annually changing standards for commercial fans, there are endless examples of overregulation. If you've ever filled out an OSHA safety form for window cleaner, you'll know exactly my point (but all that is for another column).

Government regulation should be limited to only those few instances where markets for goods, services and labor fail. Markets don't normally fail, but the textbook example is the idea of an externality. That is when the exchange of a good or services imposes a cost or benefit to someone not involved in buying or selling the item. Pollution is the textbook example of a negative externality, where smoke or toxic emissions imposes costs on other people who are not buying or selling the product. Vaccines are the textbook example of a positive externality, where benefits flow not just to the maker and recipient of the vaccine, but to others as well.

The benefit of the COVID vaccine is a stunning reduction in hospitalizations and deaths. Few vaccinated people are hospitalized or die from COVID. Today, with the vaccine available to those age 12 and older, hospitalization and death are mostly voluntary as a choice made by those who've elected not to receive the vaccine. If these people bore the full cost of their healthcare and burial expenses, the argument for a vaccine mandate would lessen. But, that's not how we pay for healthcare. Moreover, crowded hospitals impose significant secondary costs on all of us, which I'll save for another column.

Thus far, most individuals have dodged the financial cost of COVID health expenses. The government has made the vaccine and tests free, and insurers have yet to fully adjust their premiums for the disease. That will change, perhaps in the coming weeks. It will be costly and affect almost all of us. That should occasion some thinking about just how bad the cost increase will be.

Over the past four months, about 1 in every 300 unvaccinated adults has been hospitalized with COVID. In contrast, vaccinated adults have about 1 in 10,000 hospitalized. These hospitalizations cost between $51,000 and $76,000 each. So, over a full 12-month period, we expect the costs for unvaccinated individuals to range from roughly $450 to $684 per person. That is the share of total unvaccinated hospitalizations spread over the unvaccinated population. For the average vaccinated person, the cost is under $25 a year.

Insurance firms are busy figuring out reasonable ways to build these new costs into health insurance premiums. As the season for open enrollment in healthcare insurance start in a few weeks, most American businesses should anticipate eye popping rate increases. My estimate is that for an unvaccinated family of four, healthcare insurance premiums likely will rise to nearly $2,740 per year. For a vaccinated family of four, the increase may be less than $95 per year.

These are 'back of the envelope' calculations, but they are in the approximate range of actual cost differences that can be anticipated between the vaccinated and unvaccinated. So, as CEOs meet with insurers, they are likely to face some grim choices. One option may spread the cost over all employees. Another option will offer to charge different rates for the vaccinated and unvaccinated. This is akin to the higher health insurance rates paid by smokers. It's worth thinking how this might shake out in a typical firm.

Let us take a 300-person warehousing firm, with each employee having three family members on their plan. Now let's suppose exactly one half of the employees and their families are vaccinated, and the other half is not. In this case, if the costs are spread out across the whole workforce, the extra cost per family is $1,296 per year at the high-cost range. Now suppose a second plan option is to charge each employee a surcharge based on their vaccination status. The vaccinated worker will be paying less than $100 per year extra for their family of four, while the unvaccinated worker will be paying $2,740 per year for their family.

The cost works out to be equal to an extra $1.32 per hour over a year of work, so few employers are going to wish to bear that cost in healthcare premiums. I think this makes it very unlikely that most employers will cover that extra cost. This difference will also detail some pretty uncomfortable conversations with workers.

This puts employees in a difficult position, especially when autumn is the typical time for employers to settle on a new health insurer and for employees to choose their plan. It takes about a month to get both vaccines, so for workers who have not been vaccinated, the 2022 health plan enrollment season might offer a surprising rate shock. This also puts employers in a tough spot, and that's where President Biden's vaccine mandate helps. Instead of the unvaccinated minority venting their frustration at the CEO or owner, they can instead get angry at the President.

In a better world there'd be no need to mandate vaccines for a life-threatening disease that has clobbered our economy. Vaccines are a marvel of scientific achievement, free enterprise and the American spirit. In a better world, Americans would be lined up to be vaccinated. However, in the world we now inhabit, Biden's vaccine mandate gives businesses an easy excuse to insist upon vaccinations among their workers before they face the certain arithmetic of paying for this pandemic. The wiser heads in the business community should be grateful for this vaccine mandate.

Learning to speak Holcombese

I'm a little worried. I think I'm starting to understand Gov. Holcomb.

When he was talking about the Afghan refugees, he said he wanted Indiana to "be there on the back end" after the 14-day screening and vetting process. That means that if nothing goes wrong, the state will take all the credit for a job well done.

When he criticized President Biden's mandatory vaccination policy for private businesses, he said it was "a bridge too far." That means the governor would love to issue such a mandate, but knows he can't get away with it in this state full of freedom-loving nitpickers.

When he was in Richmond, praising the economic potential of Wayne County, he said the county was "on the 50-yard line" and on the right "flight path," that it had a "target rich environment" to attract companies and just had to "sell, sell, sell" itself because it already has the magic of "location, location, location;" He meant the state will gladly throw some money into the pot for whatever development scheme the county comes up with.

He sort of lost me when he went off on a tangent about something or other being "in Indiana's DNA," but I still got the gist of his bully-pulpit, cheerleading-from-behind boosterism.

That's because of his increasing use of the business jargon ever present in today's corporate America, with which, unfortunately, I am agonizingly familiar.

I spent a career in newspapers, which were once peopled by half-drunk ne'er-do-wells who could always find a source and dig out the dirt but could not spell or parse a sentence and thought "professional standards" meant wearing the tie without the gravy stains on payday.

But even journalism was eventually taken over by The Suits, middle managers who spout catchy but empty phrases meant solely to keep the troops befuddled and convince the corporate bosses in a bigger city that the bottom line is always in sight.

So, while I can't help the governor "run the state like a business," a pledge I'm sure he will make any day, I can help him with his apparent quest to sound like a businessman instead of an elected official.

To that end, a few suggestions for those times when the governor needs just the right cliché:

There is no "I" in team: You're just one taxpayer among millions, and I am the governor. Deal with it.

We need to think outside the box: This is probably unconstitutional, but that's the Supreme Court's problem.

Let's circle back to that: My public relations staff hasn't told me what to say yet.

It will be a win-win: You will love my idea and come to think of it as yours.

This is where the rubber meets the road: Whatever it was, I really mean it this time, because we're on the 50-yard line.

We need more boots on the ground: Because otherwise it won't matter that we're on the right flight path.

It's all about synergy: I don't know what that means exactly, but it sounds awesome.

We're facing some strong headwinds: If this doesn't work, it's not my fault.

It was a paradigm shift: I don't know what went wrong, but it wasn't my fault.

We have too many chiefs and not enough Indians: It's those damn legislators, and when the politically correct crowd complains on Twitter, I didn't really say that.

We need to tear down our silos: You're just not paying attention to me.

I could go on and on – the supply of corporatism is endless. But I don't want to belabor the point.

I just hope the governor and I are on the same page, taking the 30,000-foot view so we are comparing apples to apples and getting the low-hanging fruit while avoiding the elephant in the room so we can run with it. If not, I have an open-door policy and never want it to seem like I'm just phoning it in. I'm ready for your two-cents worth, governor – remember, there are no bad ideas, so just put your thinking cap on and ballpark it so we can wrap our heads around it.

And at the end of the day, be careful going forward where you put your stake in the ground, because it's just putting lipstick on a pig if you try to square a circle without due diligence.

This wasn't a one-off – that is not in my DNA – so I hope that wasn't a bridge too far.

A year-round tomato sauce

If you are like me and enjoy homemade tomato sauce year-round, this recipe is for you. It's a great way to use up any lingering tomatoes at the end of the season.

Lynda Balslev

If decent plum tomatoes are nowhere to be found, you can make the sauce with the ubiquitous grape tomatoes readily found year-round in most shops.

This sauce gets an extra boost of flavor from a roasted red bell pepper, which adds smoky sweetness and a pleasing burst of color. Crushed red pepper flakes and black pepper add further dimension to the sauce with a nice kick. Be sure to taste the sauce for seasoning, then let it rest for a few moments to allow the flavors to meld before tasting again. Don't be bashful when it comes to the salt, and a spoonful of sugar will add any summer sweetness you may miss.

You will be pleased with the results: This no-nonsense, faux summer sauce is a bright and fresh condiment to splash on pasta, smear on pizza, or layer into baked dishes at any time of year. It can also be used as a sauce for meatballs or even as a base for a soup.

Note that if you substitute grape tomatoes for the plum tomatoes, you will not be able to remove their skins, which will yield a chunkier sauce. The sauce may be refrigerated for up to four days.

Roasted Tomato
Pepper Sauce
Active time: 15 minutes
Total time: 1 hour
Yield: Makes about 2 1/2 cups

2 pounds ripe plum (Roma) tomatoes, halved lengthwise
1 large red bell pepper, stemmed and seeded, quartered
Extra-virgin olive oil
Salt
1 small yellow onion, finely chopped

3 garlic cloves, minced
1 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1 teaspoon kosher salt, or to taste
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Pinch of sugar (optional)

Heat the oven to 400 degrees. Brush the tomatoes and pepper with oil and lightly season with salt. Arrange on a rimmed baking pan, cut sides down. Roast until the vegetables soften, begin to shrivel, and turn golden at the edges, about 45 minutes. Remove from the oven and let cool to the touch, then pull away the skins. Coarsely chop.

Heat 2 tablespoons oil in a skillet. Add the onion and saute until soft and translucent without coloring, 4 to 5 minutes. Stir in the garlic, oregano and red pepper flakes and saute until fragrant, about 1 minute. Add the tomatoes and red bell pepper and cook, stirring, for a few minutes to meld the flavors.

Transfer to a food processor and pulse to blend to your desired consistency. Season with 1/2 teaspoon salt, or more to your taste, the black pepper and sugar if desired.

Mayo Clinic Minute: Are plant-based burgers better for you?

By JASON HOWLAND
Mayo Clinic News Network (TNS)

Plant-based burgers have soared in popularity over the past couple of years. Are these meat alternatives healthier for you than the real thing? Introducing more plant-based foods in your diet is a good thing, says Katherine Zeratsky, a Mayo Clinic registered dietitian nutritionist, but pay attention to the ingredients.

It looks like a burger. It cooks like a burger. Some say it tastes similar to a burger. But is it healthier?

"It really depends on how that plant-based burger is made."

Katherine Zeratsky says the benefit of plant-based burgers usually comes in the form of fiber and other nutrients. But then comes the issue of fat.

"Some plant-based burgers are going to have added fat, and oftentimes, the added fat is a saturated fat."

Angela Weiss / AFP / Getty Images / TNS

Beyond Meat and Beyond Burger patties made from plant-based substitutes for meat products sit on a shelf for sale on November 15, 2019 in New York City.

Commonly added fats are coconut oil or palm oil. Like with natural meat burgers, saturated fats can be concerning.

"Saturated fat has an association with raising our bad cholesterol, and the concern is that it may increase our heart disease risk."

High sodium and calories also can make a dent in health benefits of a veggie burger. Zeratsky says eating more plant-based foods like vegetables or whole grains is a good approach.

"Just compare products."

Along with added fiber, there's another benefit to a plant-based diet.

"This is an opportunity to allow someone who enjoys meat to have something that is similar to that, yet is less impactful on the environment."

The Emmys weren't wrong – many dream of having a boss like Ted Lasso

To hide my tears after encounters with one particular editor during my internship years, I would retreat to the restroom at the back of the newsroom.

Whenever I would see this editor approaching my desk, my stomach would knot up as I prepared for a discussion that would inevitably make me want to scream or swear. She was mean. She was harsh. Most importantly, her style of management didn't inspire me to do better. It made me want to quit.

I hated every single interaction with this manager. I was miserable under her tutelage. She was the opposite in every way of the fictional character Ted Lasso, played by Jason Sudeikis in the Apple TV Plus television show that won an Emmy for outstanding comedy series. The show also landed Sudeikis an Emmy for outstanding lead actor.

The series received 20 Emmy nominations, all well deserved. But the show stands out not just for its acting and directing but also for what it depicts – a manager who strives to create an emotionally safe workplace.

Ted Lasso is an American football coach hired to run an English soccer team. Lasso's charming coaching style and endless optimism win over the mediocre team and fans.

Sudeikis's Lasso had me at his handwritten, slightly crooked "Believe" sign posted over his office door. His corny expressions and pep talks to the soccer players – even after a brutal loss – make you wish you had a boss like him.

"When it comes to locker rooms, I like 'em just like my mother's bathing suits. I only wanna see 'em in one piece," Lasso says in one episode as he tries to end a feud between two players.

Lasso's personality is so sunny you need a pair of sunglasses in his presence.

So, what's this got to do with personal finance, you might ask?

Well, many people resign – sometimes without another job – because they just can't take the abuse from their boss. Others retire too early and without the financial security they should have, concluding that staying is not worth the cost to their mental health.

Every year, U.S. businesses lose $1 trillion to voluntary turnover, according to a 2019 Gallup report.

"And the most astounding part is that most of this damage is self-inflicted," the report said.

Conservatively, the cost of replacing a departing employee can range from one-half to two times the staffer's annual salary.

"A 100-person organization that provides an average salary of $50,000 could have turnover and replacement costs of approximately $660,000 to $2.6 million per year," Gallup estimated.

Over half of exiting employees who quit say their manager or organization could have done something to prevent them from leaving their job, Gallup found. And these folks said that in the three months leading up to their departure, no one spoke to them about their job satisfaction or discussed their future with the organization. If you don't feel wanted, why stay?

Workers want to be respected. They want to know they are valued. They shouldn't be yelled at, belittled or taken for granted. And certainly not sent running to the bathroom in tears. If your management style deflates an employee, you are doing your job poorly. Instead, be like Ted Lasso.

The pandemic has made things even worse. Quit rates are high. Realizing how short life is, lots of employees are opting to leave their job rather than endure the low pay or a tyrannical supervisor – or both.

In a July report titled "The 'Great Resignation' Is Really the 'Great Discontent,'" Gallup found that 48 percent of American workers are actively job-searching or watching for other employment opportunities. The dissatisfaction – not with pay but with workplace conditions – cuts across all categories, from customer service employees to highly professional positions.

Here's an interesting factoid from Gallup's resignation report: "It takes more than a 20 percent pay raise to lure most employees away from a manager who engages them, and next to nothing to poach most disengaged workers."

Think about that. Companies are losing people to competitors who don't have to offer a pay raise, just the prospect of a better working environment.

People are rightly reassessing how and for whom they want to work. Workers aren't expecting the perfection you get when a room full of writers can craft the characteristics of the best boss. Employees understand conflicts will occur.

"You don't need to be best friends to be great teammates. Heck, even Woody and Buzz got under each other's plastic," Lasso says, gently trying to get the feuding players to respect about each other.

If you want to fix the "Great Resignation" trend, get your managers to address why people are so discontent. It's likely that the reason people want to resign is that they have a bad boss.

Workers want to be respected. They want to know they are valued. They shouldn't be yelled at, belittled or taken for granted. And certainly not sent running to the bathroom in tears. If your management style deflates an employee, you are doing your job poorly. Instead, be like Ted Lasso.

MU volleyball storms back from two sets down

Spartans stun Hornets in five sets

By DILLON BENDER

The Manchester University volleyball team stormed back from a two-sets-to-none deficit to stun the host Kalamazoo College Hornets in five sets on Wednesday, Sept. 22.

The Hornets jumped out to a two-set advantage after taking the first two frames by 25-18 and 25-19 tallies.

Manchester did not wilt, roaring back in the third and fourth sets both by 25-15 counts.

The fifth and final set remained tight as neither side led by more than two points.

A kill from Sara Shultz, from Churubusco and East Noble High School, helped seal the come-from-behind victory for Manchester.

After falling behind 13-12, the Black and Gold ended the match on a decisive

4-1 run. Back-to-back kills by Halle Planck, from Gas City and Mississinewa High School, and Sara Shultz, from Churubusco and East Noble High School, sealed

the come-from-behind victory for Manchester.

The Spartans came away with 14 total blocks in Wednesday's contest while limiting the Hornets to just a .016 hitting percentage. Kalamazoo hit -.103 and -.175 in the third and fourth sets.

Both Carley Camp, from Logansport, and Erika Kramer, from Greensburg and North Decatur High School, led the block party with a pair of solo blocks. Camp added five block assists while Kramer assisted on four blocks. Sara Shultz and Halle Planck added four and three block assists, respectively.

Samantha Campbell, from Brownsburg, and Sara Shultz both finished Wednesday's match with 11 kills.

Carly Ripberger, from Tip-ton, posted a team-high 34 assists, while Helaina Walter, from Marion and Eastbrook High School, led the Black and Gold with 25 digs.

Manchester improved to 6-7 on the season and is now 3-1 in five-set matches. Kalamazoo fell to 3-7 on the year.

These two teams will meet again at 1 p.m. Saturday in Angola as a part of the Trine tri-match. Following their second consecutive match-up with the Hornets, Manchester will face the Trine Thunder to conclude play at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Dillon Bender is the sports information director for Manchester University.

Manchester golf's Knepper places in top 10 at Bluffton Fall Classic

By DILLON BENDER

The Manchester University women's golf team wrapped up a competition in the Bluffton Beaver Fall Classic on Sunday evening. The Spartans shot their best two-day total of the season (744) en route to a fifth-place team finish.

Senior Sara Knepper, from Bremen, continued her solid fall with her second top 10 placement of the season. Knepper placed eighth overall this weekend following round scores of 89 and 85.

Sophomore Bella Carrillo, from Wabash, finished the weekend with a two-day total of 186. She carded round scores of 94 and 92. Carrillo finished tied-for-20th.

After competing in three consecutive outings to begin the fall, the Black and Gold will be off this upcoming weekend. Manchester will head to the Wooster Fall Invitational on Saturday, Oct. 2.

Spartan women's soccer falls at St. Mary's; will play at Alma today

By DILLON BENDER

The Manchester University women's soccer team dropped a 3-0 decision on the road at St. Mary's College on Wednesday, Sept. 22.

The host Belles scored all three of their goals in the second half. Rose Stackhouse scored her seventh goal of the season 59 seconds into the second period. Katie Harrington (48th minute) and Mary Kaczynski (78th minute) rounded out the scoring for SMC.

Adelle Stanko, from Okemos, Michigan, led Manchester with three shots in the game. Becca Colbert, from Porter and Chesterton High School, made 10 saves in goal.

THROUGH THE GATES

The afternoon sun spotlights the majestic façade of a mansion, seen through the gates that keep out all but the chosen. The gates of heaven are never closed to anyone; our Father opens His arms to us all. He only requires that we trust in Him. He wants us to join Him in His mansion. We strive to reach our spiritual goals, but often our human nature gets in the way. Learn how to reach your goals with God's help at your house of worship; walk through His gate, it's always open.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSAL

Manchester Community Schools (MCS) is hereby seeking written proposals for architectural services for approved building projects slated to begin construction in the spring of 2023 at the junior-senior high school and elementary school.
General Requirements
Sealed proposals shall be submitted no later than 4:00 p.m. (local time) on September 30, 2021. Every proposal must be enclosed in an envelope clearly marked "Proposal for Architectural Services for MCS Building Projects", and shall include eight (8) written copies.
All proposals shall be submitted to:
Mr. David Terflinger, Board President
c/o Mr. Kyle Wieland, Superintendent
Manchester Community School Corporation
404 W. 9th Street
North Manchester, IN 46962
All timely responses shall be reviewed by the appropriate committee, and if necessary, the full Board of Trustees prior to acceptance/bid award. Responses may be hand delivered or sent by mail, and must address the specifications set forth in this request. Any response or proposal received after the above deadline will not be opened or considered and may be returned unopened.
Each submission/proposal must be complete. Any incomplete responses may be rejected. All respondents must comply with this RFP as a basis for the award of the proposal. Supplemental information relevant to the project may be made available if necessary.
Any questions regarding the proposal should be emailed to David Terflinger at david.terflinger@mcs.k12.in.us and Kyle Wieland at kyle.wieland@mcs.k12.in.us. Please reference "MCS Architectural Services RFP" in the subject of the email. The last day of questions to be submitted is 4:00 p.m. (local time) on September 28, 2021. Questions will only be answered in writing.
Approval
It is intended that a proposal will be recommended to the Board of Trustees on October 12, 2021 at 6:00 p.m. The Board of Trustees reserves the right to reject any and all proposals. The actual acceptance of any proposal may be delayed. Therefore, all responses must remain valid for a period of no less than sixty (60) days. Respondents may be required to meet with MCS to review their proposal and the scope of work prior to proposal award. Proposals will be awarded to the best overall respondent as determined to be in the best interests of MCS. It is intended that successful respondent and MCS shall enter into a separate written contract for services to perform the architectural services.
Rights Reserved
MCS reserves the right to: (1) receive, accept, or reject any or all proposals for any or all reasons; (2) issue subsequent requests for proposals for the same projects; (3) cancel the entire request for proposal; (4) remedy technical errors in the request for proposal process; (5) appoint an evaluation committee to review qualifications and proposals; (6) seek the assistance of outside technical experts in evaluation any or all proposals; (7) approve or disapprove the use of particular subcontractors; (8) negotiate with any, all, or none of the respondents; (9) solicit best and final offers from all, some, or one of the respondents; (10) waive informalities and irregularities in any proposal; and (11) award without discussion.
Project Description
The following three (3) projects represent the approved building projects subject to the proposal to be submitted, which should include all structural, mechanical, plumbing and electrical systems, building finishes, exterior envelope, code compliance and ADA accessibility: 1. Construct of new hallway connector between existing buildings within the following broad scope of parameters:
A. Connect administration/junior high building and high school building with enclosed hallway;
B. Modern design of exterior and interior; and
C. Estimated total budget $1.1 million.
2. Construction of a new cafeteria and renovations at the high school within the following broad scope of parameters:
A. Connect administration/junior high building and high school building;
B. Repurpose existing classroom spaces for secure building entry and admittance offices;
C. Estimated total budget $1.1 million.
3. Construction of a new entrance and renovations at elementary school within the following broad scope of parameters:
A. Repurpose existing classroom space for secure entry and office space;
B. Repurpose old office space as a family restroom and sensory room for STEM;
C. Remove and replace cafeteria floor with epoxy resin non-slip covering; and
D. Estimated total budget $900,000.00.
Submission Expectation
Interested firms should submit written proposals which include the following information:
1. Estimated fees for services, including overall dollar amount, billing rates, and in the form of a percentage of the budget total for each project;
2. Examples of comparable projects on which the firm has worked;
3. Explanation of the processes that would be used to assure that the final drawings reflect the interests and needs of the school community;
4. List of references and buildings that MCS representatives could follow-up with and visit;
5. Summary of the firm's capacity to deliver services for all three (3) projects concurrently;
6. Summary of qualifications to assure the North Manchester community that services provided will put MCS in a position to make the most out of the money budgeted for each project; and
7. Summary of potential to bring innovation in design to the projects. The proposals shall be indexed and all pages sequentially numbered in a bound format. Proposals should not contain extraneous information. All information presented in a proposal must be relevant in response to a requirement of this request, must be clearly labeled, and if not incorporated in the body of the proposal itself, must be referenced to and from the appropriate place within the body of the proposal. Any information not meeting these criteria shall be deemed extraneous and may not be considered in the evaluation process. MCS may investigate the qualification of any respondent under consideration, require confirmation of information furnished and require additional evidence of qualifications to perform all or part of any project described in this request or to otherwise complete the projects. Submission Evaluation Proposals will be reviewed by individuals selected by MCS and evaluated on factors relevant to conciseness, responsiveness and completeness of the proposal to the information requested, objectives, and deliverables as outline in this request, fee proposals, including overall fee and billing rates, prior experience, including expertise in K-12 school projects, references, key personnel and staffing ability, project approach and capacity, and local participation.

Engaged couple eager to live on their own

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old woman. My fiancée is 26. Both of us live at home with our parents but have decided to move out in a few months to an apartment. Although his parents have given their blessing, my parents are against it and keep trying to change my mind.

Abby, I have been wanting to leave for years. Both of us are experiencing tension living at home with our parents and trying to get along as adults. We feel it's time for us to move out, and we also crave our freedom. We are tired of my parents not regarding me as an adult capable of making her own decisions. What should I do? I don't want them getting in the way on move-in day. — Grown Woman In Mississippi

DEAR WOMAN: It's time for you and your fiancée to sit down together with your parents. Tell them you love them, but you are no longer minors. You are both well into adulthood, and it is time for you to live independently. Then give them the date you plan to move your belongings and stick to it. A way to ensure that they won't get in your way on moving day would be to enlist the assistance of some friends to help you make the move.

DEAR ABBY: Recently, I took my two sons to a cooking class. The instructor, a married woman and mother, was very friendly and nice. She kept telling me I was "beautiful" and how lucky my boys are to have such a beautiful mom. She also kept calling me "my love." I found it peculiar, but didn't give it a lot of thought because I presumed she was being friendly and I know some people speak that way. I am more reserved. I save words like "love" for people I truly love (my kids and husband).

However, my husband was upset that I didn't ask her to stop. He said he felt I disrespected him because I allowed someone else to call me "my love." Had she been a man, I'd understand his feelings, but I saw no harm in it. Am I wrong for not having spoken up? — War Of Words In New Jersey

DEAR W.O.W.: Your husband is overreacting. The woman was not being disrespectful. She went overboard trying to pay you a compliment. All you had to do was smile and say, "Thank you very much, but you are making me uncomfortable. Please. No more."

DEAR ABBY: We gave our daughter-in-law a $100 check for her birthday, as she is hard to shop for. That was 11 1/2 months ago. When we went over there the other day, we saw our check stuck to the fridge door. Of course, it is now stale. Her birthday is coming up in two weeks. Any suggestions of what we should do this time? — Means Well In Arizona

DEAR MEANS WELL: Point out to your daughter-in-law that you noticed the check you gave her for her last birthday hadn't been cashed, and ask why. Take your cues from her answer. If she doesn't need the money, send her a nice card she can plaster onto her refrigerator next to the outdated check.

The Bible lays out the definition and the purpose of the church on Earth

Q: The pandemic has put the church out of commission, it seems. Can it ever come back and win a lost world to Christ? — P.R.

A: The Bible lays out the definition and the purpose of the church on Earth and from Jesus' own words

He said, "I will build My church, and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it" (Matthew 16:18). Jesus is the foundation of all Christian experience.

The word "church" refers to the company of all believers in Christ, who are spiritually united by their relationship with Christ through His salvation. The church isn't just a local congregation; it includes all believers everywhere — even those who have died and are now in Heaven. This is the great fellowship of believers across the ages. And Christ is the head of the church, His body, of which He is the Savior (Ephesians 5:23).

This is why it is important to worship the Lord together in His Spirit and in His truth. Not only do we need to look to the Lord, but He has given us one another to encourage. Even our example of attending church may encourage others who may be searching for God. We may never know what impact it has on others to see us faithfully going to church. The Bible does not teach that the church will ultimately convert the whole world to Christ, but God's Word does teach that His followers are to "go into all the world and preach the gospel" (Mark 16:15).

The church should be setting the pace. The church should be taking its proper place of leadership in the nation.

Wabash volleyball highlights week with win over Whitko

Apaches host Rochester on Tuesday, travel to Tippecanoe Valley on Thursday

By CLAY MAXFIELD
Wabash Plain Dealer
Freelance Reporter

Wabash’s varsity volleyball team faced a full slate of competition this week with three matches in a row against Three Rivers Conference foes Whitko and Southwood while clashing against Madison-Grant on Wednesday, as well.

The Apaches went 1-2 in their week of play with a victory against the Whitko Wildcats while dropping match-ups against Madison-Grant and Southwood to move to 14-8 overall.

After splitting conference play throughout the week, Wabash currently sits at third place with Southwood and Tippecanoe Valley still undefeated against Three Rivers opposition. Rochester trails Wabash by one game.

With a trifecta of competition in the week, Wabash head coach Katie Cromer focused her team around continuing to grow on the court and letting the results speak for themselves.

“I thought they did a really good job of coming out and competing, figuring out who your opponent is,” Cromer said. “Every new opponent is someone different you have to look at. I thought they did a good job, after that first set and really made some adjustments and were playing hard. As long as they’re playing hard and playing well, I don’t care what the result is.”

On Tuesday, Wabash swept Whitko in three sets (25-18, 25-14, 25-21) before falling to Madison-Grant 3-1. The Apaches extended the match after dropping set one 25-18 by edging the Argylls 25-23 in set two.

On the brink of falling behind two sets, Wabash managed to regroup in set two after Cromer reaffirmed the Apaches’ points of attack.

“I just told them that we got a really good look at things. ... We got a good look, we know what their tendencies are, we know what they can do. Let’s just regroup. I told them the spots I thought were open on defense and I thought we came back and fought hard to win that second set.”

The Apaches rallied in their second set after falling behind amid a run where Madison-Grant rattled off six consecutive points to take the lead midway through.

Wabash tallied 42 kills with Faryn Morris led with 17. Emma Tracy led with 30 assists.

Ashlynn Cruz registered 28 digs followed by 17 from Morris.

Wabash dropped the final two sets against the Argylls 25-17, 25-22.

“I thought Madison-Grant was probably the best team we’ve seen so far this year. I thought we never rolled over, we didn’t give up. Compared to yesterday’s match (Whitko) which we didn’t come out and play very well, so I was happy to see that we rose to the occasion. They were solid all the way across and I thought we battled well,” Cromer said.

The Apaches hosted Southwood on Thursday night, falling to the Knights 3-1. Wabash gained the upper hand, winning set one 25-23 before dropping the next three straight 25-17, 25-14, 25-22.

Jade Stumbo and Isabella Vandervelden led in kills with 11 and 10 while Ashlynn Cruz had 17 digs in the Apaches’ loss. Emma Tracy finished with 29 assists.

Win or lose, Cromer believes that her team is rounding into shape with just three regular-season matches remaining.

“I feel like people are starting to get into their positions,” Cromer said. “We have some freshmen on the floor, everyone is getting more comfortable. We only return four players that have

The Manchester University women’s soccer team pressed the visiting Trine University Thunder in a narrow 2-1 defeat in non-conference action on Tuesday, Sept. 21.

Early in Tuesday’s contest, the Spartans drew a foul in the box that resulted in a penalty kick for the Black and Gold. Alex Parr, from Russiaville and Western High School, stepped up and converted the PK sending Manchester to a 1-0 advantage in the 11th minute.

It was Parr’s first score of the season.

Manchester’s defense held until Trine’s Mia Augustino scored the equalizer in the 29th minute. Both teams headed into the intermission tied at 1.

Trine, who came into the contest ranked seventh in the Great Lakes Region, broke the 1-1 tie in the 58th minute following a goal from Bella Mabry.

Manchester University goalkeeper Becca Colbert, from Porter and Chesterton High School, made 11 stops on the day.

The Spartans (1-3) were scheduled to play at St. Mary’s on Wednesday evening. Kickoff against the Belles was scheduled for 7 p.m.

Trine (8-0-1) is scheduled to host Earlham College on Saturday, Sept. 25.
